I didn't learn about money management until I joined the banking industry as a teller. Up until then, I was just like everyone else--including my parents. We were expected to struggle when we were young.

It's just the way it was. We learned the lessons of hard knocks and didn't get serious until we had real responsibilities.

My parents tried, but what active kid wants to listen to Mom drone on about finance?

Now, with three growing kids of my own, I am on a mission.

I became determined my children will grow up to be financially responsible, and I don't want your kids to be left behind. I have launched an effort to teach every child what he or she needs to know about money.

Over the years, I became a close colleague of our Director of Training. She told me about advancements in online e-learning that have turned traditional learning on its head. She told me how the same techniques game designers use to make their app go viral work in e-learning, too.

So, we assembled a team of interested business owners, education experts, and web designers to build Budget Brainiacs, the best way ever to motivate kids to want to learn sound financial principles.

Education they won't get in school

body

CNN Money recently reported that 85% of college graduates must move in with their parents, but you can give your children the tools to live life on their own. Your kids can learn how to buy their first car with money they earned, save to buy their own home, and prepare for their retirement, while their former schoolmates move back in with Mom and Dad.

*... only one third of high school students feel "very confident" in their ability to manage their own finances, and one third have already encountered issues with managing their own finances.
(High School Seniors' Financial Knowledge and Outlook: A Discover Pathway to Financial Success Survey, April 2013)*

This program is not coins and counting for young children. It's sound money management for ages 10 and up. You can join the Budget Brainiacs community to give each of your kids his or her personal learning channel where they will soon know how to manage

- bank accounts, including the types and purpose for each;
- applying for jobs and apartments and their obligations toward employers and landlords;
- creating a realistic monthly budget;
- buying and financing a car,
- and much, much more.

A proven, effective method of motivation

body

Cash for chores, lessons, and worksheets, or counting games can quickly become boring. We created Budget Brainiacs with kids in mind. Each child earns points for understanding financial concepts, then redeems the points at our online store for cool prizes, such as a wallet or backpack. The learning methods are endorsed by leading child authorities, financial planners, banks, insurance companies, and most important—moms and grandmas.

"I'm a professional mommy blogger who gets about 30,000 hits on my website each month...My readers are very enthusiastic about this club., Their kids are buzzing about the points they can earn for cool prizes.,. But also they talk about how dumb it is to rack up debt and how you should plan ahead for big expenses. These comments are coming from 13-year-olds! Wow!

- H Walters

I home-school my children and I'm always looking for ways to bring real-life lessons into my teaching. Your program is fantastic. Every day, my kids ask, When are we going to Budget Brainiacs? They love the games and they especially love earning points when then pass the quizzes. They each opened a bank account, and now they understand how interest works.
